Rainbow Rangers

Rainbow Rangers is an American computer-animated television series produced by Genius Brands which premiered on Nick Jr. on November 5, 2018. The series follows seven 9-year-old magical girls who reside in the kingdom of Kaleidoscopia.

Plot

"Rainbow Rangers" is set in a magical land called Kaleidoscopia. It focuses on seven 9-year-old girls who are the guardians of both nature and their land. Each of the girls, including Rosie Redd, Bonnie Blueberry, Indigo Allfruit, Anna Banana, Mandarin Orange, Pepper Mintz, and Lavender Laviolette, is inspired by the colors of the rainbow. Each girl is given a different power, including speed, strength and music, to use to protect the citizens, clean the planet, and strive to make the world a better place for everyone.

Why It Sucks

1. The animation is very rudimentary, bland, and basic.
2. The theme song is very annoying and ear bleeding. It also plays multiple times in one episode.
3. The voice acting is horrible, especially when it comes to Bonnie Blueberry, Anna Banana, and Lavender Laviolette. Really, this can apply to any of the characters.
4. Like Nella the Princess Knight, this show uses identity politics as a marketing point, but it fails in the end because the show is very glitzy and glamorous, and the only real tomboy on the team is Indigo Allfruit, who is portrayed in a bad light compared to the other girls.
5. Bland characters with only one personality trait.
6. Very toyetic and merchandise-driven.
7. Super formulaic.

Redeeming Qualities

1. At least the show had good intentions in teaching kids to take care of the earth.

Retrieved from "https://terriblenicheshows.miraheze.org/w/index.php?title=Rainbow_Rangers&oldid=292"

This page was last edited on 22 April 2020, at 01:14.

Content is available under Creative Commons Attribution-ShareAlike 4.0 International (CC BY-SA 4.0) unless otherwise noted.